

George S. Johnson has more than fifteen years experience in civil litigation, including five years doing insurance defense work. Since 2008, he has headed his own law practice. He has handled hundreds of cases in all phases of personal injury, and he also specializes in representing victims of nursing home and extended care abuse cases.

A former U.S. Army Reservist, George received his BBA from Georgia State University and a Law Degree and a Masters Degree in Telecommunications from Indiana University's Maurer School of Law, both with honors.

He is a member of the Bar of Georgia (since 2000) and Pennsylvania (since 2013) and is licensed to practice law in both states. He is also a member of various Federal courts in those jurisdictions.

Any one who has suffered harm by the actions of another person can potentially benefit from our services. This includes not only the person harmed, but their families and survivors as well.

We help people who have suffered injury through abuse, neglect or criminal wrongdoing in a wide variety of situations:

Injury, loss, or death resulting from:

- Nursing Home abuse or neglect
- Assisted Living facility abuse or neglect
- Mistakes by medical professionals
- Negligence by building owners resulting in injury to tenants or visitors
- Car Crashes
- Badly manufactured products

Nursing Home Neglect or Abuse

When you have paid for a loved one's care in a nursing home, you have entered a legal agreement of expectations. Patient neglect by the nursing home care providers is a form of abuse— abuse of the victim, of the agreed responsibilities and, therefore, the law. George S. Johnson is your advocate for what's right, and will work with you to identify the root cause of concerns, responsibilities and accountabilities. It is natural to feel uncertain and overwhelmed with questions: We provide clear answers and a path to justice.

Assisted Living Neglect or Abuse

Abuse within assisted living facilities is very hard on the victims and their families and loved ones. George S. Johnson has specialized experience with assisted living facility abuse—experience that can help you obtain justice and peace with your situation. Mr. Johnson is willing to come to you as your hands-on, dedicated, impassioned advocate. He will work hard to achieve the best possible resolution, obtain a fair settlement, and most importantly, help prevent further suffering and abuse for other families.

Medical Malpractice

Medical malpractice can take many unfortunate forms. We see it in cases with the elderly, but we also see it in medical treatment of young adults and even children. If you are witnessing, or suspicious of, the effects of medical malpractice, you have options. What may appear to be large medical facilities with an impenetrable legal team does not mean the end of hope. George S. Johnson is a medical malpractice lawyer in Atlanta, Georgia, and handles such cases regularly. He will work with you to clarify the concerns and adopt the best road forward to resolution, regardless of the age, injury or illness.

Catastrophic Injury and Wrongful Death

A wrongful death is a devastating occurrence with the potential to impact anyone. It can happen to the elderly in assisted living situations, just as one example. It can be the result of medical malpractice on those of any age. When you have lost a loved one to wrongful death, you are not powerless. With George S. Johnson, you have resources and the law on your side. We will help you identify the causes and next steps for a wrongful death analysis. George is your guide and expert for such trying circumstances; your advocate and leader on the path to justice.
